Board President's Year-End Review

—By Richard Hoffman

A Happy New Year wish to all!

Our community experienced many positive accomplishments this past year and one disappointment.

The Good

- The view-fence painting program was a resounding success. As a result of the tireless efforts of our many resident volunteers and management staff, the program was well-planned, well-publicized and professionally executed with our painting contractor. While past view-fence painting efforts experienced significant owner non-participation, this year only six owners elected to 'opt-out' – assume responsibility to maintain their view fences themselves. This experience should serve as a model for similar improvement and maintenance projects in the future.
- The ongoing Easement Litigation with the owner of the adjacent 12-acre parcel was settled on favorable terms and the lawsuit was dismissed. The cloud that this litigation cast over our community for the last few years has now been removed and we have some certainty and predictability regarding the future use and development of the 12-acre parcel by our 'neighbor' to the Southeast.

The Bad

- Year-end brought the untimely passing of Gregg Dittoe, a member of the Board and a past President of the Association. Gregg's enthusiastic energy in service to the community will be missed, as a colleague and a friend.

Looking Ahead – January 2015

- I met with our contractor for the new hiking trail connecting to Lone Mountain on December 20. Construction of the new trail will begin the week of January 5 and should take approximately two weeks to complete. Additional maintenance and repair of some of our existing trails will be performed as well. We will make a further announcement of the official opening of the new Lone Mountain Trail sometime late in January.

Vehicle Transponders

- It has recently been brought to the attention of the Security Committee that some Bellasera residents may have removed the soft transponders which were affixed to the windshield of a 'registered' vehicle and transferred (re-affixed) them to a new vehicle 'unregistered' with the management office. This is a serious breach of the Vehicular Transponder Rules adopted by the Board to enhance community security. The new soft Vehicular Transponder system was adopted and implemented by the Board at significant cost to the community to enhance security and accountability over the old 'hard' portable transponders. Moving transponders between vehicles without notifying the management office defeats the purpose and design of the system. A Transponder (soft affixed or hard hand-held) may only be used on the vehicle for which it was originally issued unless the management office is notified of a transfer. No Transponder can be shared in any manner with an unauthorized user. A scheduled update to our security system will enable us to match Transponder recognition with license plate identification and unauthorized transfers may result in deactivation of all Transponders registered to a Bellasera resident at the Board's discretion. Your cooperation is appreciated.

January in the Garden

—By Joe McDade

Jack Has Arrived!

Of course I mean Jack Frost which paid us a visit right after Christmas as our temperatures dipped below freezing. Here in the Sonoran desert we can expect freezing temperatures half a dozen times this month which reminds us that January is a quiet time for your garden with a focus on protecting tender plants (such as bougainvillea, citrus, hibiscus, natal plum and annual flowers) as well as performing some selective pruning. Remember, succulents should not be overlooked in the cold weather which I'll cover in some detail below.

Succulents and Cold Weather

First, let's define Succulent: "Any fleshy plant that belongs to one of many diverse families, among them species of cactus, aloe, stonecrop, houseleek, agave, and yucca." We have a variety of indigenous succulents that have adapted to the extreme heat and dryness of our environment. During our winter months, you will need to follow some specific guidelines for their proper care which are outlined below.

Frost Protection—When freezing temperatures are predicted, protect tender succulents or those in bloom by covering them with a blanket, sheet, frost cloth (available in plant nurseries) or cardboard box overnight. Remove the covering in the morning when it warms up.

Aloes—Many aloes are hardy enough to withstand short-duration freezes, but their flowers are not. To protect flowering aloes, use a frame of pipe, wood or bamboo stakes over the plant then lay the protective covering over that.

Planting

Bare Root Roses & Fruit Trees—This was covered in some detail last month and planting of roses and fruit trees can continue into January as nurseries should be well stocked.

Succulents—Plant winter-growing succulents in the ground or in containers. Choose a location with high, filtered shade or one that is shaded from the afternoon sun. While winter sun suits all winter-growing succulents, summer sun, especially in the afternoon, can be too much for them.

Cool-Season Herbs—Transplant borage, cilantro, dill, parsley and thyme.

Cool-Season Veggies—Sow seeds for peas, root crops and salad greens. Transplant broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower and Chinese cabbage.

Warm-Season Vegetable Seeds—(If you are ambitious) Sow seeds indoors for peppers and tomatoes so that seedlings are ready to transplant outdoors between mid-February and mid-March (with frost protection). Small- to medium-size fruits are more likely to produce a good crop than beef-steak varieties, which often crack before they mature.

Pruning

Deciduous Fruit Trees—Cut out all dead, diseased, or broken wood, any crossing branches, and water sprouts.

Maintain Roses—Remove dead, weak and crossing canes. Prune back plants by one-third to one-half to promote spring blooms. Rake up all leaf litter and dispose of it to control pests and diseases. Fertilize and spread fresh mulch.

Winter Guidelines—Wait to prune cold-tender plants until danger of frost is over in mid-March. Prune native plants after they bloom in late spring or early summer

Citrus

If you are fortunate to have citrus in your garden, you are beginning to enjoy the harvest of fresh lemons, limes, grapefruit and/or oranges. To help guarantee a good crop every year, this is a reminder that your citrus should be fertilized in January or February with one-third of the tree's annual nitrogen requirements. Follow these guidelines:

-Apply at the tree's drip line (edge of the canopy) and slightly beyond, which is where actively growing root tips will absorb the product. Water deeply right after applying fertilizer.

-The amount to apply depends on the tree's size and how many years it has been in the ground. A small two-year-old tree needs one-half pound of nitrogen per year.

-The amount increases one-quarter pound annually until the tree is six years or older. It then takes about 1.5 pounds of nitrogen annually, with the exception of mature grapefruit trees, which require half that amount.

Remember: Citrus in Bellasera needs to be "Dwarf" and in your backyard. Also, the best place to keep most citrus is on the tree as long as possible. Citrus will grow sweeter on the tree even after ripening. Tangerines will not stay on the tree as long as other citrus.

Miscellaneous

Houseplants—It's time to inspect houseplants for aphids, scale insects, spider mites, and mealybugs. Rinse infected plants with commercial insecticidal soap or a solution of 1 tablespoon of dishwashing liquid mixed with one gallon of water. Blast gray aphids off plants with a strong jet of water.

Bougainvillea—If you would like to take some of those magnificent Bougainvillea flowers inside the house to enjoy, the trick is to immerse the bracts in water for one hour before placing them in a vase.

Spring Projects—Our growing season starts next month and you should start by preparing and planning for your upcoming planting projects.

Garden Observations for the Month

Mesquites—They begin to lose their leaves this month as they fade to yellow or brown and begin to fall off which is normal leaf loss in these plants. While screwbean mesquite is completely deciduous each year, velvet mesquite lose their leaves gradually, often as the new leaves emerge.

Cacti—If your saguaro or other cacti have a reddish color during the winter, it may simply be a response to the cool dry conditions of winter and nothing needs to be done.

Happy New Year!
